

Great War Cabinet: 1914-1918

Crisis Procedures:

Private Directives:

Private Directives are a form of special crisis documentation used to conduct operations and actions a delegate wants to do to consolidate power within the committee. For the purposes of this committee private directives and crisis notes are the same and their outcome and occurrence as well as segregation is dependent upon the evaluation by the crisis staff.

Special Letterheads:

Certain Personalities in the Cabinet would be given letters at a certain point stating certain aims they have to privately achieve by the end of the cabinet, these letterheads would also come with these personalities being granted special powers.

Press Release:

Press releases can be used by delegates to convey a message or an important statement to the committee which will be made actionable, the passing of a press release is again dependent upon the crisis staff, in case of passing the personality would also be subject to 3 questions by either the committee or dias.

Private Meetings:

Delegates may use this procedure to meet with personalities both part of the committee or outside. In case of the personality already being part of the committee both parties would firstly have to give consent and then would be moved to another room for a short period of time. In the other case, the non-present personality would be simulated/represented by the crisis staff. Both scenarios are preceded by the approval of the crisis staff.

Dual Notepad System:

The delegates would be using 2 different notepads, one for shorter time intensive/sensitive directives and the other for longer arcs. Both notepads/diaries would be kept in the committee, never to be taken out.

Trials:

Delegates under certain extreme situations of treason and doubt may put certain personalities on trial for possible repercussions altering the dynamic of the committee. The mandate and procedures of the trial will be directed and may be subject to change by the crisis staff.

War Rooms:

In certain crisis situations, the cabinet may be divided up into multiple small segments to discuss their country's strategies efficiently or for a certain group of same ranked individuals to discuss future measures among them to ease tensions between their states.

Note:

Any and all procedures within the cabinet including both specialized and conventional procedures are subject to change and are at the discretion of the crisis staff.